Acknowledgments: The Experts Who Helped With The World's Billionaires List

The launch of the annual World's Billionaires list is an intensive, months-long endeavor requiring long-hours and extensive collaboration from the whole Forbes staff. But the Forbes wealth team that analyzes the personal fortunes of more than 1,800 of the world's wealthiest people (including 100 who dropped out of the ranks and numerous suspects who failed to make the cut) also relies enormously on the outside insight and cooperation of dozens of industry experts. From mansions to private industrial conglomerates, to bottles of wine and post-war contemporary art, these professionals give their time to help ensure our valuations reflect the most current and nuanced market conditions. Forbes extends its thanks to and wants to acknowledge the following list (by no means all-encompassing) of people and companies that helped us with this year's effort.
